

Ikirezi the precious pearl

The Rwandese small farmer adornment

Down the hills of Gahara in the marshlands of Kivogo, Nyakavogo, Rubimba, Ruhanga, Rubona and Rununga; hidden to the eyes of the world, are Ikirezi's geranium, lemongrass and patchouli organic farms which complement the preciousness of the pearl that is Ikirezi, with their subtle fragrance.

A little high on the hillside stands majestically the only oil distillery in the area. The distillery which produces the purest organic geranium, lemongrass, eucalyptus, patchouli oils, and more.

Ikirezi's business helped take many widows, orphans and poor farmers out of poverty and adorned them with its beauty and the richness of its heart. A heart that cares, a heart that is generous.

Lives have been changed, small farmers have seen many of their dreams come true, and looking back, they are pleased with the fruits of their labor.

All smiles, they now in return gratefully care for the fragrant plants that gave them back dignified lives and hope for a much brighter future. What they may not realize is that their hands are far reaching beyond the borders of the land of a thousand hills, beyond the oceans.

Their hands are precious, their labor is valued, they unknowingly put smiles on many faces in Rwanda and overseas and immensely contribute to the wellness of anyone who comes across their sweet smelling essences.
